

SYNOPSIS.

fellow! What did he want at this mo

If Ryanne saw that he was too stantly overcome. She hadn't seen him, and for this he was grateful.

old ones, rare ones, rugs that are bought once and seldom if ever sold

"Why, yes. That's my business."

Nothing surprising in that," replied

George laughed and waited for the

"You see. Ryan is as good a name with prize-fighters, politicians and bar chemists. The two extra letters put the finishing touch to the name. A jewel is all right, but what tells is the way you hang it round your neck.

To me, those additional letters represent the jewel Ryan in the hands of a

"I am; three generations. What's George was frowning, "Haven't l

"Not to my recollection." A specu lative frown now marred Ryanne's in his memory for such a casualty as the meeting of George. He never forgot a face and certainly did not remember George's. Rather, the frown

Percival Algernon had seen him somewhere during one of those indispositions of the morning after. "No; I

"Likely enough. It just struck me that you looked something like a chap

named Wadsworth, who was half-back

want to chat with you about rugs.

Since the girl had disappeared and with her those imaginary appurte

nances that had for a space trans formed the lounging-room into a stage, that the room was simply a common meeting-ground for well-dressed per unimpeachable, the impeccable,

George saw again with normal vision sons and ill-dressed persons, of the doubtful and the peccant; for in Cairo,

Grandmothers' Bellefs

I've heard of you, indirectly."

you got?"

the favor?"

think you have made a mistake."

"You talk like an American."

met you somewhere before?"

the matter?" with sudden concern

Ryanne. "No one else has, either."

George had no silly ideas about trade.

Ryanne presented his card.

"As they do in Cork."

George naively.

Lalique.

You are interested in rugs? I mean

ment?

again.'

George Percival Aigernon Jones, vice resident of the Metropolitan Oriental Rus much, as the French say, he also personnent of New York, thirsting for received the cause. The desire to shake mance, is in Cairo on a business trip. George till his teeth rattled was influence Ryanne arrives at the hotel in Cairo with a carefully guarded bundle

CHAPTER III .- (Continued.)

George's romance gathered itself for & flight. Perhaps it was love thwarted and the gentleman with the mustache and imperial, in spite of his amiability, might be the ogre. Perhaps it was love and duty. Perhaps her tover had gone down to sea. Perhaps (for lovers are known to do such things) he had run away with the other girl. If that was the case George did not think highly of that tentative gentleman's taste. Perhaps and perhaps again; but George might have gone on perhapsing till the grack o' doom, with never a solitary slimmer of the true state of the girl's mind. Whenever he saw an unknown man or woman who attracted his at- explanation. ention, he never could resist the impulse to invent a romance that might as they make them; but it classes

Immediately after dessert the two rose; and George, finding that nothing more important than a pineapple ice detained him, got up and followed. Mr. expanne almost trod on his heels as they went through the doorway into the cosy lounging-room. George dropped into a vacant divan and waitad for his cafe a la Turque. Mr Ryanne walked over to the head-por ter's bureau and asked if that gentleman would be so kind as to point out Mr. George P. A. Jones, if he were anywhere in sight. He thoughtfully, not to say regretfully, laid down a

"Mr. Jones?" The porter knew Mr. Jones very well. He was generous, and treated the servants as though they were really human beings. Mr. Ryanne, either by his inquiry or as the result of his bribe, went up several degrees in the porter's estimation. "Mr. Jones is over there, on the divan by the door."

"Thanks." But Ryanne did not then seek the young man. He studied the quarry from a diplomatic distance. No: there was nothing to indicate that George Percival Algernon Jones was in any way handicapped by his Arthuresque

"No fool, as Gloconda in her infinite wisdom hath said; but romantic, terribly romantic, yet, like the timid bather who puts a foot into the water, finds it cold, and withdraws it. It will all depend upon whether he is a real collector or merely a buyer of rugs. Forward, then, Horace; a sovereign has already dashed headlong down the far horizon." The curse of speaking his thoughts aloud did not lie beavily upon him tonight, for these cogitations were made in silence, unmarked by any facial expression. He proceeded across the room and sat down beside George. "I beg your pardon," he be-gan, "but are you not Mr. Jones?"

Mildly astonished, George signified

"George P. A. Jones?"

George nodded again, but with some as in ancient Egypt, there is every at in his cheeks. "Yes. What is class and kind of humans, for whom "The girl had just finished her the Decalogue was written, transmiss and was going away. Hang this scribed, and shattered by the turbu-increase of Dope Fiends.

Frog taking is greatly on the inase in London. Somebody recentintroduced "hasheesh" into that The Egyptians at their feasts, to prevent excess on the part of the company, were accustomed to place a introduced "hasheesh" into that est city, and so popular has it be-me that two hasheesh chambers are keleton in a conspicuous part of the anqueting room, with this inscription wer it: "Remember, you ment soon to like it." An opicure, on being told his, replied: "Ah, that was if they v in full swing not a hundred yards m Picendilly.

No Use for Boys Any More, omobody has invented an electric ice that will split kindling wood

The of from

BY HAROLD MACGRATH Author of HEARTS AND MASKS Cho MAN ON THE BOX etc. Illustrations by M.G.KETTNER ...

lent Moses, an incident more or less | of shops. I wanted to be my own man his chance acquaintance, and he found nothing to warrant suspicion. It was them. hunt him up in Cairo, in Constantinople, cities where his business itinerary led him. The house of Mortimer & Jones was widely known. This man Ryanne might have been anywhere between thirty and forty. He was tall, well set up, blond and smooth-skinned. True, he appeared to have been ill-fed recently. A little more flesh under the cheek-bones, a touch of color, and the Irishman would have been a handsome man. George could read a rug a league Ryanne was a past-master in this regard; it was necessary both for his business and safety.

"Certainly, I'll take a look at it. But I tell you frankly," went on George, "that to interest me it's got to be a very old one. You see, it's a little fad of mine, outside the business end of it. I'm crazy over real rugs, and I know something about every rare one in existence, or known to exist. Is it a copy?"

"No. I'll tell you more about l when we get to my room."
"Come on, then." George was now quite willing to discuss rugs and car

Having gained the room, Ryanne threw off his coat and relighted his cigar, which, in a saving mood, he had allowed to go out. He motioned George to be scated.

"Just a little yarn before I show you the rug. See these cuffs?"

"Yes." "You will observe that I have had to reverse them. Note this collar? Same thing. Trousers-hems a bit frayed, coat shiny at the elbows." Ryanne exhibited his sole fortune. Four sovereigns between me and George became thoughtful. He was generous and kind-hearted among those he knew intimately or slightly. but he had the instinctive reserve of the seasoned traveler in cases like this. He waited.

He had never posed as a gentleman's "The truth is, I'm all but done for son in the sense that it meant idle-And if I fail to strike a bargain here with you. . . Well, I should hate to tell you the result. Our consul "How do you pronounce it?" asked would have to furnish me passage home. Were you ever up against it to the extent of reversing your cuffs and "I never saw it spelled that way beturning your collars? You don't know what life is, then." George gravely produced two good cigars and offered one to his host. There was an absence of sound broken presently by the cheerful crackle of matches; two billowing clouds of smoke floated outward and upward. Ryanne sighed. Here was a cigar one could not purchase in all the length and breadth of the Orient, a Pedro Murias. In one of his doubt fully prosperous epochs he had smoked them daily. How long ago had that been? "Yonder is a rug, a prayer-rug, a holy to the Moslem as the idol's eve is to the Hindu, as the Bible is to the Christian. For hundreds of years it never saw the outside of the Sultan's palace. Que day the late, the recently late. Abdul the Unspeakable Turk. forehead. It did not illustrate a search gave it to the Pasha of Bagdad. Whenever this rug makes its appear ance in Holy Mecca, it is worshiped, and none but a Sultan or a Sultan's favorite may kneel upon it. Bagdad had its source in the mild dread that the hundred mosques, the old capital of Suleiman the Great, the dreary Tigris and the sluggish Euphrates, s muezzin from the turret calls to prayer, and all that; ch?"

> George leaned forward from his chair, a gentle terror in his heart, "The Yhiordes? By Jove! is that the Yhlordes?"

on the varsity, when I entered my freshman year." Admiration kindled in Ryanne's eyes. To have hit the bull's-eye with "A university man? Lord, no! I was turned loose at ten; been husking so free and quick an aim was ample ever since." Ryanne spoke easily, not proof that Percival Algernon had not boasted when he said that he knew a tremor in his voice, although he had received a slight mental jolt, something about rugs.

"No; no college record here. But I "You've guessed it." "How did you come by it?" George demanded excitedly.

"From the carpet fellows? We do "Why do you ask that?" "Man, ten-thousand pounds could ble business over here. What have not purchase that rug, that bit of car-"Well, I've a rug up in my root I'd like to show you. I want your judg-ment for one thing. Will you do me pet. Collectors from every port have en after it in vain. And you mean to tell me that it lies there, wrapped in butcher's paper?"

"Right-O!"

Ryanne solemnly detached a cuff and rolled up his sleeve. The bare muscular arm was scarred by two ong, ugly knife-wounds, scarcely Next he drew up a trousers leg, disclosing a battered shin. "And there's another on my shoulder-blade the closest call I ever had. A man who takes his life in his hands, as l have done, merits some reward. Jones, I'll be frank with you. I am a kind of derelict. Since I was a boy, I have hated the humdrum of off

Learning by Love Letter.

"Love letters between young mer and women are an excellent me our Holmes. But it must be done actfully. We have known a young ndy who broke off an engagemen because her flance returned her low letters with the spelling errors neath ted in red tok.

people are always very much ed and absurdly hart when forgotten these days. From the tail to go and come as I pleased. To do of his eye he gave swift scrutiny to this and live meant precarious exploits. This rug represents one of I am telling you the family not an unusual procedure for men to secret; I am showing you the skele ton in the closet, confidentially. I in Smyrns, or in any of the Oriental stole that rug; and when I say that the seven labors of our old friend Hercules were simple diversions compared, you'll recognize the difficulties I had to overcome. You know some thing of the Oriental mind. I handled the tob alone. I may not be ou of the jungle /et."

George listened entranced. He could readily construct the scenes through which this adventurer had gone; the watchful nights, the untiring patience, off, as they say, but he was a child in the thirst, the hunger, the heat. And the matter of physiognomy, whereas yet, he could hardly believe. He was a trifle skeptical. Many a rogue had made the mistake of playing George's age against his experience. He had made some serious blunders in the early stages of the business, however; and everybody, to gain something in the end, must lose something > at the start. "If that rug is the one I have in mind, you certainly have stolen it. And if it's a copy, I'll tell you quickly enough." "That's fair. And that's why, Ryanne declared, "I wanted you to look at it. To me, considering what I have gone through to get it, to me it is the genuine carpet. To your expert eye it may be only a fine copy. I know this much, that rare rugs and paintings have many copies, and that some one is being hooked, sold, bamboozled sandbagged, every day in the week. It this is the real article, I want you to take it off my hands," the adventures finished pleasantly.

"There will be a hue and cry." "No doubt of it."

"And the devil's own job to get it out of Egypt." These were set phrases of the expert, preliminaries to bargaining, "One might as well carry round a stolen elephant."

"But a man who is as familiar with the game as you are would have little difficulty. Your integrity is an established fact, on both sides of the water. You could take it to New York as a copy, and no appraiser would know he difference. It's worth the attempt. I'd take it to New York myself, but you see, I am flat broke. Come; what do you or I care about a son-of-a-gun of a Turk?" drolly.

"What do you want for it, suppos ing it's genuine?" George's throat was dry and his voice harsh. His conscience roused herself, feebly, for it had been a long time since occasion had necessitated her presence.

Ryanne narrowed his eyes, carefully palancing the possibilities. "Say, one thousand pounds. It is like giving it away. But when the devil drives, you know. It is beyond any set price; it is worth what any collector is willing to pay for it. I believe I know the kind of man you are, Mr. Jones, and that is why, when I learned you were in Cairo, I came directly to you. You would never sell this rug. No. You would become like a miser over his gold. You would keep it with your emeralds (I have heard about them, too); draw the curtains, lock the doors, whenever you looked at it. Eh? You would love it for its own sake, and not because it is worth so many thousand pounds. You are sailing in e few days; that will help. The Pasha is in Constantinople, and it will be three or four weeks before he hears of the theft, or the cost," with a certain grimness. "You haven't killed any one?" whis pered George.

"I don't know; perhaps. Christian ity against paganism; the Occidental conscience permits it." Ryanne made a gesture to indicate that he would submit to whatever moral arraignment Mr. Jones deemed advisable to make

But George made none. He rose hastily, sought his knife and, without so much as by your leave, slashed the twine, flung aside the paper, and threw the rug across the counterpane. It was the Yhlordes. There was not the slightest doubt in his mind. He had heard it described, he had seen a photograph of it, he knew its history and, most vital of all, he owned good copy of it. Against temptation that was robus and energetic and alluring (like the man who insists upon your having a drink when you want it and ought not to have it), what chance had concience, grown innocuous in the long period of the young man's good beavior? Collectors are always honest before and after that moment arrives when they want something desperate ly; and George was no more saintly than his kind. And how deep Ryanne and his confederates had delved into human nature, how well they could read and judge it, was made manifest in this moment of George's moral re-lapse.

Bagdad, the Jinns, Sinbad, the Thou

Not an affective Branch.

The learned counsel was endsavoring to impress the court with the fact that his client had always been anxious to settle. "My lord," he said, impressively, "only eighteen months ago we held out the olive branch." "Yes," responded the witty judge, "but there were no clives on it."

The art of living rightly is like all ris It must be learned and Forty Thieves; George was transport- us. A disgression, perhaps, but more entally to that magic city, stand- pertinently an application a healthy hound.

The nerves of a smoker are general- due to the fact that never before had ly made apparent by the rapidity of he been wittingly the purchaser of his exhalations. These two, in the stolen goods. He never tried to gloze several minutes, had filled the room with a thick, blue haze; and through this the elder man eved the younger. The sign of the wolf gleamed in his eyes, but without animosity, modified as it was by the half-friendly, halfcynical smile

"I'll risk it," said George finally, having stepped off the magical carpet, as it were. "I can't give you a thousand pounds tonight. I can give you three hundred, and the balance tomor- To return it to the Pasha at Bagdad row, between ten and eleven. at Cook's."

"That will be agreeable to me."

George passed over all the available cash he had, rolled up the treasure and tucked it under his arm. That somewhere in the world was a true believer, wailing and beating his breast and calling down from Allah curses upon the giaour, the dog of an infidel. who had done this thing, disturbed George not in the least.

"I say," as he opened the door, "you must tell me all about the adventure. It must have been a thriller." "The "It was," replied Ryanne.

story will keep. Later, if you care to "Of course," added George, moved by a discretionary thought, "this transaction is just between you and me." "You may lay odds on that," heart-"Well, good night. See you at Cook's in the morning."

ing between the Tigris and the Eu- Temptation then no longer at his phrates, in all its white glory of a shoulder, George began to have thousand years gone. Ryanne, the qualms, little chaps, who started buzroom and its furnishings, all had van- zing into his moral ears with all that ished, all save the exquisite fabric pat- maddening, interminable drone which terned out of wool and cotton and makes one marvel however do schoolknotted with that mingling love and teachers survive their first terms skill and patience the world knows no Among these qualms there was none more. He let his hand stray over it. that pleaded for the desolate Turk or How many knees had pressed its thick his minions whose carelessness had yet pliant substance? How many made the theft possible. For all George strange scenes had it mutely wit- cared, the Mostem might grind his nessed, scenes of beauty, of terror? It forehead in the soulless sand and shone under the light like the hide of make the air palpitate with his plaints to Allah. No. The disturbance was > been variously suspicious in regard to certain past bargains, conscience had found no sizeable wedge for her de murrers. The Yhlordes was confessedly stolen. He paused, with his hand upon the door-knob of his room. If he didn't keep the rug, it would fall into the hands of a collector less scrupulous. would be pure folly, and thankless, it was one of the most beautiful weavings in existence. It was as priceless in its way as any Raphael in the Vati-can. And he desired its possession intensely. Why not? Insidious phrase! Was it not better that the world should see and learn what a wonderful craft the making of a rare rug had been, than to allow it to return to the sordid chamber of a harem, to inevitable ruin? As Ryanne said, what the

to him? Against these specious arguments in favor of becoming the adventurer's abettor and accomplice, there was in the curious variety of its scenery. first the possible stain of blood. The half French and half Italian, geoman agreed that he had come away from Bagdad in doubt. George did not like the thought of blood. Still he had collected a hundred emeralds, not one of which was without its red record. Again, if he carried the rug deuce was a fanatical Turk or Arab

LAKE GENEVA, SWITZERLAND it is Lovable in Calm and in Storm, at Berne.-Although the summer at old-fashioned by those newly in formed with the more modist taste for its winter sports, there are still a few of us who prefer its July to its January. The neiges d'antan have receded to the mountain tops, and the summer tourist is larily content to leave them there, re-

View Over Lake Lucerne From the Road Near Weggis.

lakes that which washes the quays of Geneva, Lausanne, Evian and Montreaux, and the shores of two countries, is perhaps the most backneyed, yet to myself-maybe from old assoclations; coetus dulces, valete!-- it is the most lovable. There is varied lure graphically as well as politically in Its primitive fishing and ancient sailing boats. Its colors may be less chameleon in their changes than those of Tahoe, its trout less accessible to the angler than those of Lake Louise, its traditions less solemn than those of Galilee, yet it is an inland sea that the traveler may learn to love for its own sake, even though it may not move him, like Rosseau, to drop his tears in Byron made verse on its shores, and here, too, Gibson finished his greatest work; yet such associations count for little in the sum of its magic. It is lovable in calm and in storm, at sunset, or in the twilight that succeeds. The long reflections of cumulous clouds seen of an afternoon from the hotel balcony at Evian are unforgettable. The fisheries of Lake Geneva are unsatisfactory from the standpoint of port. Of angling, properly speaki and roach, which are caught on long bemboo rods and coarse float tackle. with a worm.-The Field, London.

FARM BOY IS DETERIORATING

Labor-Saving Machinery Given as One Cause by Dr. L. J. Cooke of Minnesota University

Minneapolis, Minn.-The universal ase of modern farm machinery, relieving the farm boy of much of the heavy work formerly done by hand, s to blame for his reported physical inferiority to his city-bred classmate. says Dr. L. J. Cooke, physical direcfor at the University of Minnesota Dr. Cooke recently declared that the average city boy physically was much superlor to the country-bred lad. Here are some of the reasons to which Dr. Cooke ascribes the country boy's inferiority:

Use of labor-saving machinery on the farm.

Financial ability of farmers to hir aborers to perform the heavy wo relieving their sons of the task Riding on farm machinery, pl ing, mowing and performing other farm duties, causing the boy to become stoop shouldered. Lack of systematic physical cul-

Absence of athletic rivalry among oung men on the farms.

ENGLISHMAN AS A PROPHET Bends Sealed Parchment to Historical

Association, to Be Opened After 100 Years. New York .- One of the unusual oferings at the anunal exposition of the Modern Historical Records asso ciation here is a sealed parchme sent to the association by Frederi Harrison, English historian and ee mist. The trustees of the ganization are directed to over the envelope and see that nains unopened for at least 100 It is understood that the inch s in the nature of a prophecy, on a study of present conditions.

Five forms of "permenent recordere being preserved by the associon—terra cotta tablets, pho graphic records made of indestruct-ble clay, photographic positives on glass, parchments and portrait busts.

Officials Asked to Quit, Marvell, Ark .-- At a mass meeting of county citizens every man holding a county office was asked to resign in order that some enforcement of law can be brought about. In demands for resignations it is stated that any officers failing to comply with request will be whipped and sent out of the county Marderers, bootlegging borse

Saved by Cigarette Case

Ambulance surgeons tell of mases where a bullet has struck man's ofgarette case a glancing blov and not even so much as pler-

It Was the Yhlordes

"Good night." George passed down | home with his other purchases, he he corridor to the adjoining room. And now, bang! goes Pandora's box.

CHAPTER IV.

An Old Acquaintance That faculty which decides on awlessness of our actions; so the noted etymologist described conscience. It fell to another distin-guished intellect to add that concience makes cowards of us all. Ay. She may be overcome at times, side-tracked for any special desire that demands a clear way; but she's after us, fast enough, with that battered antern of hers, which, brought down from all tongues crisply into our own reads-"Don't do it!" She berself is not wholly without cunning. She rarely stands holdly upon the track to flag us as we come. She realizes that she might be permanently ditched. No; it sand and One Nights, Alibaba and the is far safer to run after us and catch i > ing, lived one hundred and nine years; Heraclitus, who never ceased crying, only sixty. Laughing, then, is best, and to laugh at another is perfectly justifiable, since we are told that the gods themselves, though they nade us as they pleased, cannot help Turquelse a Horsey Stone. The turquelse is the especial pro-tection of horsemen and averts seci-

Classified.

"My precious lamb," said the new parson to the little girl, "I fear my your father is one of those wayward sheep, long strayed from the fold."
"Dad's not a sheep," smiled the little girl. "He's a Bull Boose!"—Judge.

could pull it through the customs only by lying, which was as distasteful to his mind as being a receiver of stolen

He had already paid a goodly sum gainst the purchase; and it was not likely that a man who was down to reversing his collars and cuffs would take back the rug and refund the money. The Yhlordes was his, hap pen what might. So conscience snuffed

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Get off and let's go to the ball

"I got off the other day. Can't re-

"Then we'll go to the theater

"Can't do that either. The o plays a double-header and we work to night."

out her red lantern and retired.